

Brian Daigle
Online Training &
Development Supervisor

Brian Daigle is the Online Training & Development Supervisor at the National White Collar Crime Center (NW3C) where he manages the development of course curriculum and materials for instructor-led and asynchronous online courses. His work encompasses a variety of disciplines, including instructional design, writing, and multimedia development. Prior to joining NW3C, Brian served as an Assistant Director at Penn State University in the Office of Learning Design for the College of Information Sciences and Technology. During his time at Penn State University, he worked with faculty to develop and maintain courses and course media in Information Sciences & Technology, Enterprise Architecture, Cybersecurity, Data Science, and Security and Risk Analysis.

Brian earned a Bachelor of Arts in Film Production and Experimental Psychology from Keene State College in New Hampshire. After attending Keene State College, Brian worked in film/video production in the Boston area, developing a variety of products including promotional videos, television commercials, and political campaigns. Brian's work also made appearances in reality television and feature films.

In 2014, Brian furthered his education by earning a Master of Science in Education and a Certificate in Instructional Design from Western Oregon University. During his time at the University, he worked as a Graduate Assistant and at the university's Center for Academic Innovation.

