

Moe McClanahan
High-Tech Crime Specialist

Moe McClanahan is a High-Tech Crime Specialist with the National White Collar Crime Center (NW3C).

After 20 years in law enforcement, Moe retired from the Christiansburg Police Department (CPD) in Virginia. Moe served her last 8.5 years at CPD as the Internet Crimes Against Children (ICAC) Investigator. She has been trained and has worked both reactive and proactive cases including National Center for Missing and Exploited Children Cybertips, peer-2-peer investigations, and undercover investigations. During her time as an ICAC Investigator, she trained and educated over 10,000 children, parents, and police officers in Internet safety. Aside from her work at NW3C, Moe also serves as the Director of Training and Education with the Safe Surfin' Foundation where she continues to educate on Internet safety and volunteers her time with Special Olympics.

Moe earned both her master and bachelor degrees in Criminal Justice from the University of Northern Colorado.

